Service Record

His direct battlefield service started on Carida during the early phases of the CIS's proxy war using the IRC with one of the first conflicts being with the 104th and 91st, a poor call from command resulted in his squad being nearly wiped out and Cross being one of the only survivors giving him an early taste of the cost of war, as the skirmish continued the 104th were bounced to Naboo and then back to Carida where Cross went on separate missions with the Jedi Commander Dagan Rex and got closer with his brothers and the legion leading up to the Siege of Carida. The first major battle with the CIS on ground nobody knew what to expect Cross lead on the frontlines with his platoon facing threats such as tanks, droideka's and the Sith Assassin

Asaj Ventress losing many of his brothers and people he grew to come close with.

On the first Carida ambush led a squad of 12, lead the squad that saved Dagan Rex from IRC custody killing 2 of their officers, led a Platoon of 35 troops during the IRC attacks on Naboo and the second ambush, lead a platoon of 40 men during the siege of Carida, killed two rancors personally assisting in the elimination of over 6 saving 2 jedi from their grabs, lead the ARC contingent during the Defence of Alderaan, took a pyke prisoner, called wat tambor a good boy.

Once Carida finally was won and stood due to his acts of service he was awarded a medal and flown off world to partake in ARC training which after passing he re-joined the ranks now as ARC-8348 rather than CS-8348 taking part in numerous relifef missions on Carida helping the civilians rebuild and exterminating the last of the droid presence after this the 104th had a large amount of downtime which would see Cross going on missions to the senate, more relief missions on Carida until the battle of Alderaan where he led an ARC contingent with the 212th which played a critical part in freeing Alderaan from separatist control and later raiding the captured jedi temple.

He was promoted to Alpha Class forcing him to leave the 104th armoured battalion taking part in missions on Tatooine, Rhen, Coruscant, Naboo and republic space promoting him again to the XO of Alpha Class where he currently serves.

The majority of people Cross knew and cares about have been killed in the field of battle over Carida, Christophsis and various other fronts being the only survivor from his initial clone squad and one of the two first batch's from the 104th left alive.
