

CO-3368 "Filtrum"

Overview

Trooper "Filtrum" was amongst the first clones to be deployed to the front lines of the Clone Wars. He was born with unusual silver hair, a minor mutation within the cloned specimens of the 91st Airspeeder Battalion. His strategic prowess that seemed extraordinary for a clone, his ability to improvise, adapt and overcome obstacles, and his calm, collected demeanor under fire made him a leader. That calm, collected demeanor was what earned him the rank of Staff Sergeant of the BARC Company. Upon arrival within the republic installation, he was stationed as Staff Sergeant of the BARC Company. When the battle passed and the alarms blared, the pressure the ground forces were under in orbit, engagements with the friendly ships that were being down engulfed in flames. Blaster bolts, brothers being killed, nightmares would come to haunt him. Him and his men as overwatch for fellow callsigns.

They finally came back to base, men were missing. Within a moment's notice, their commander declared yet another deployment. Morale was at an all time high- they were eager for battle. They marched out of the FOB; his men cheering "For the Great Khan!", We ride for him! Explosions erupted and blasters went off. The companies and their men scrambled in response. Next, they were forced to defend the wall with his company providing overwatch once more, there were too many of them; we couldn't see them through the bushes. They were too agile, it was as if we couldn't hit them at all. One scream over the radio after another, officers fell followed by their men. They stood their ground, they did it "For the Republic".

Filtrum had vowed to prevent those massacres from striking his brothers ever again; initiative was taken and changes were made, improvements that were made. Worthiness for a title of an officer within a newly established Company, known as "Convor", he was entrusted with its establishment under Captain "Strafer". Duty called and demand was made, Convor was forged into a force to be reckoned with, the elite; a callsign that could stand its ground against the impossible. A demand that was met by a trial, for without too much room for preparation. The 91st was the first to deploy onto the surface of Christophsis. The first to set foot onto a planet that would later result in a bloodbath for his brothers, with a miscommunication between his unit's command and the navy, what followed was meant to be no more than a "simple recon mission". Turned into a battle for the battalion's survival, dropped within a central courtyard surrounded by armoured brigades and separatist droids in all directions, history was repeating itself. Yet another bloodbath, screams over the communications relay on his wrist and explosions in all directions. He had ordered his men

Additional Information

Notable Battles / Events Participated In

- Pirate Assaults of Carida
- CIS Invasion of Carida
- Campaign of Christophsis
- Numidian Prime Skirmish
- Corellia Campaign

Major Contributions

- During the first steps of his journey as a non-commissioned officer within the Republic Military, Filtrum was assigned as BARC Company's first Staff Sergeant, where he aided in the establishment of the 91st's BARC Company. Laying out the ground work for the Company's later improvements. Filtrum's platoon was, for quite a while known as the greatest the Company, or even the 91st could offer at a time of need. Always emerging with minimal casualties, but maximum results... a platoon from which emerged remarkable clones, with a few names to mention; being "Curse" and "Serce".

- Chosen by the Commander at the time, "Neyo" had promoted Filtrum to the rank of 1st Lieutenant under Captain "Strafer". Where he had established the basis of the 91st's "Convor" Company alongside his right hand man at the time. 2nd Lieutenant "Ahab"; Convor was a company that had "set the standard" for more companies and units to come. With Strafer's promotion to the rank of Major, Filtrum and Ahab were also elevated accordingly. Spearheading the trainings & trials of the special forces-themed force in preparation for the horrors of Christophsis and campaigns to follow.
- He had participated in the disastrous 1st landing of the 91st in Tophen City of Christophsis. himself and his company stood their ground firmly until they found themselves totally surrounded, with squads being picked off one by one; Filtrum had instructed his men to push into the nearest building. Happening to be the very building in which Nute Gunray and Wat Tambor hosted a meeting with the Pykes. The Separatist officials were extracted upon the arrival of friendly transports, however moments before boarding the aircraft Filtrum had suffered severe damage coming from a hostile AAT which was raining down fire upon the surrounding 91st callsigns. He was extracted alongside the CIS Officials, carried on the back of specialist "Jailbird", temporarily being bound to the medbay only to then join the remainder of the 91st's deployments on the surface of Tophen City.
- After the withdrawal of the 91st from the surface of Christophsis, enduring losses; Filtrum was amongst the few officers transferred to the newly formed 442nd Siege Battalion. Where; at first he was stationed at the new Captain of "Doom" Company; later to be promoted to the rank of Major following the absence of his predecessor. He was responsible for the establishment of the vast majority of the 442nd's structure from the ground up, upon receiving word of his new station. Now spearheading operations alongside his men in the surface of Corellia.
