Republic Invasion of Carida

company to multiple victories with minimal casualties, contributing to the elimination of the IRC threat.

Christophsis Campaign (Tophen City & Leesis City)

Initially deployed toward Corellia, the 41st was redirected to Christophsis to support failing Republic forces as the 91st had sustained heavy losses and needed to pull out. As a Major, Swordzo played a central role in coordinate strategy alongside HICOM and the 104th Battalion.

He helped lead the assault on Tophen City and later spearheaded the invasion of Leesis City, establishing the first forward operating base within the industrial zone. He also oversaw operations throughout the city's capture and personally supervised the mapping of its underground tunnel systems.

His actions during the campaign directly contributed to Republic victory and earned him a promotion to Colonel.

Leadership

Swordzo is known for a leadership style defined by strategic precision and operational excellence. Widely regarded within the 41st as a highly tactical and composed commander, he consistently demonstrates an ability to assess battlefield conditions and make decisive actions in even the most critical moments.

He places strong emphasis on maximizing both his own capabilities and those of his troopers, often leveraging positioning, coordination, and timing to achieve victory with minimal losses.
