

SWO - 0070 "Razor"

Overview

Senior Warrant Officer Razor is a clone serving in the 401st Legion, rising through the ranks, eventually being promoted to Senior Warrant Officer after the previous SWO, "Grey," stepped down. To the people of the Coruscant Guard with dignity, courage, and determination, and the capabilities and those around him.

Background

Razor was part of an early batch on Kamino. He was a disciplined nature, want for security and structure, and discipline, and that was a trait his Command admired of him.

The Battle of Alderaan marked a turning point in the Clone Wars. In the aftermath, the struggles of war. To some, it might be demotivating, but it inspired him to his duties as Coruscant Guard: no more.

Personality

Razor, like his name implies, is sharp, observant, strategic, and serious. He doesn't talk much, but when he does, it's short and straight to the point. People know if Razor was around, rules would be followed and mistakes caught fast. Razor isn't just about order for the sake of it.

He's an experienced squad leader and leads solely by example, a method that demands respect from his peers. Razor isn't someone to dwell on mistakes whether it's from someone else or himself. No matter it is, there's no whining, no excuses, just constructive criticism and constant learning.

The Coruscant Guard became more than just a Battalion to him, it's a place where his attention to detail, patience, and discipline mattered. Razor's early days on the capital taught him one thing: chaos happens fast, and only those who stay steady get through it.

Service Record

Razor has an extensive service record within the 401st Legion. He was originally Riot Company, becoming apart of their Rapid Response Squad. Soon after, he was promoted through the ranks becoming Company Sergeant and Company Warrant Officer shortly after. He was later promoted to Senior Warrant Officer following the resignation of the previous SWO, "Grey." His first deployment
