Early Life

Vane Senju, born into the prestigious Senju Clan, Shinsu Senjus' ability, and divine blessing for the surrounding Shinsu Senjus' Chosen one took an u could never have imagined. From a tender age, V developing a bipolar personality and a sinister nat bloodshed and warfare that scarred him for life.

His secrets are coming to light...

Path of Destruction

Vane's descent into darkness was marked by an intense gambling habit and a penchant for waging wars against civilian villages and trading companies. His actions included acts of murder and thievery for personal gain, disrupting the harmony and peace the clan had strived for. Vane silenced dissenters, erasing witnesses and leaving behind a trail of mythical events in the annals of history. As a teenager, he wielded his bestowed powers for destruction and tyranny, earning him the ominous moniker "Golden Boy."

The Judge and his Executioner

Vane's destructive path found a companion in his brother, Ikari Uchiha. From childhood, the two formed an unbreakable bond, united by similar natures and prowess. Ikari Uchiha served as Vane's right-hand man both on and off the battlefield, with their combined strength striking fear across nations. Despite their destructive endeavors, much of their activities remained shrouded in mystery, but their presence in battle foretold doom for any who crossed their paths.

After years of conquest, Vane and Ikari's dream of a formidable nation became reality. Uniting all clans in the Land of Fire, Vane earned the trust of the populace, leading to the establishment of the Hidden Leaf Village. Named the Hokage, Vane rose to power, overseeing the village's military, foreign policy, and economy. Under his rule, Konoha flourished as a symbol of wealth, opportunity, and untapped potential.

The King's Gambit

Vane's insatiable thirst for power led him to propose the concept of "Total Conquest," employing deadly war tactics to bring down entire nations, including Kumogakure. The skilled Leaf Shinobi, under Vane's command, played a pivotal role in the demise of the First Mizukage, Blare Yuki. The destruction and separation of once-inhabited lands became Vane's legacy, as Konohagakure continued to thrive under his rule.

As of the present day, Vane Senju lays in 16-32 pieces in the Land of Iron. He is survived by Ikari Uchiha.

Early Years and Lea

Carter Uchiha, a prominent figure in the turbulent [illegible], emerged as a leader from the renowned Uchiha c[illegible] inherited the mantle of leadership from his father[illegible] Clan.

Carter's upbringing was marked by the expectation of leadership, given the legacy of his father. When the Uchiha and Senju clans collaborated to establish the first ninja villages, Carter was selected as one of the initial Chunin. Taking up a leadership position, he formed a squad consisting of Genin shinobi: Fuji Senju, Josh Hyuga, Eryc Uchiha, and Axo Uchiha. Under Carter's guidance, the squad excelled, rising to the rank of Chunin during the inaugural exams.

Rise to Prominence

As news of the first Jonin Exams reached the newly formed villages, Carter was chosen as one of the five tasked with resolving issues in the The Land of Mountains. However, a significant twist awaited him as Josh Hyuga revealed that Carter had been appointed the Second Hokage. Simultaneously, Konohagakure faced turmoil due to the disappearance of Vane Senju.

Upon learning of his new role and the state of Konohagakure, Carter, overwhelmed, dropped to his knees, his eyes transforming into a spiral. Returning to the village, he declared war on Iwagakure, citing the incompetence of Tsuchikage Sosuke Kamizuru. In a daring move, Carter, accompanied by five ANBU, one of which being a so called Leon Uchiha, raided Iwagakure with the assistance of a mole named Crow Uzumaki ultimately killing the Tsuchikage and numerous other shinobi.

The Meteor Incident and Collaborations

During the war, a meteor fell onto the gates of Konohagakure. With no time to address it personally, Carter delegated the task of research and resolution to his assistant, Josh Hyuga. The study concluded that the assistance of Tall Yome and his Shinobi was needed to melt down the meteor metal. Renowned blacksmith Musashi, working tirelessly, forged Carter's Gunbai from the molten meteor metal, imbuing it with both the material and his own dedication.

Amidst political turmoil, Vane Senju staged a coup against Carter's Hokage position, with support from Sungakure and their allies. Despite a fierce battle for the future of Konohagakure, Vane emerged victorious, leaving Carter severely injured and without a left arm. This marked a turning point as Carter, upon returning to the village, distanced himself from past conflicts.

The Rogue Hunter and New Pursuits

In the aftermath, a war unfolded between and Kumogakure. Setting aside personal grievances, Carter played a crucial role in securing victory for Konohagakure by hunting down rogue Jonin on solo missions. With peace restored, he established the title of "Rogue Hunter," disapproving of shinobi who abandoned their duties and went rogue.

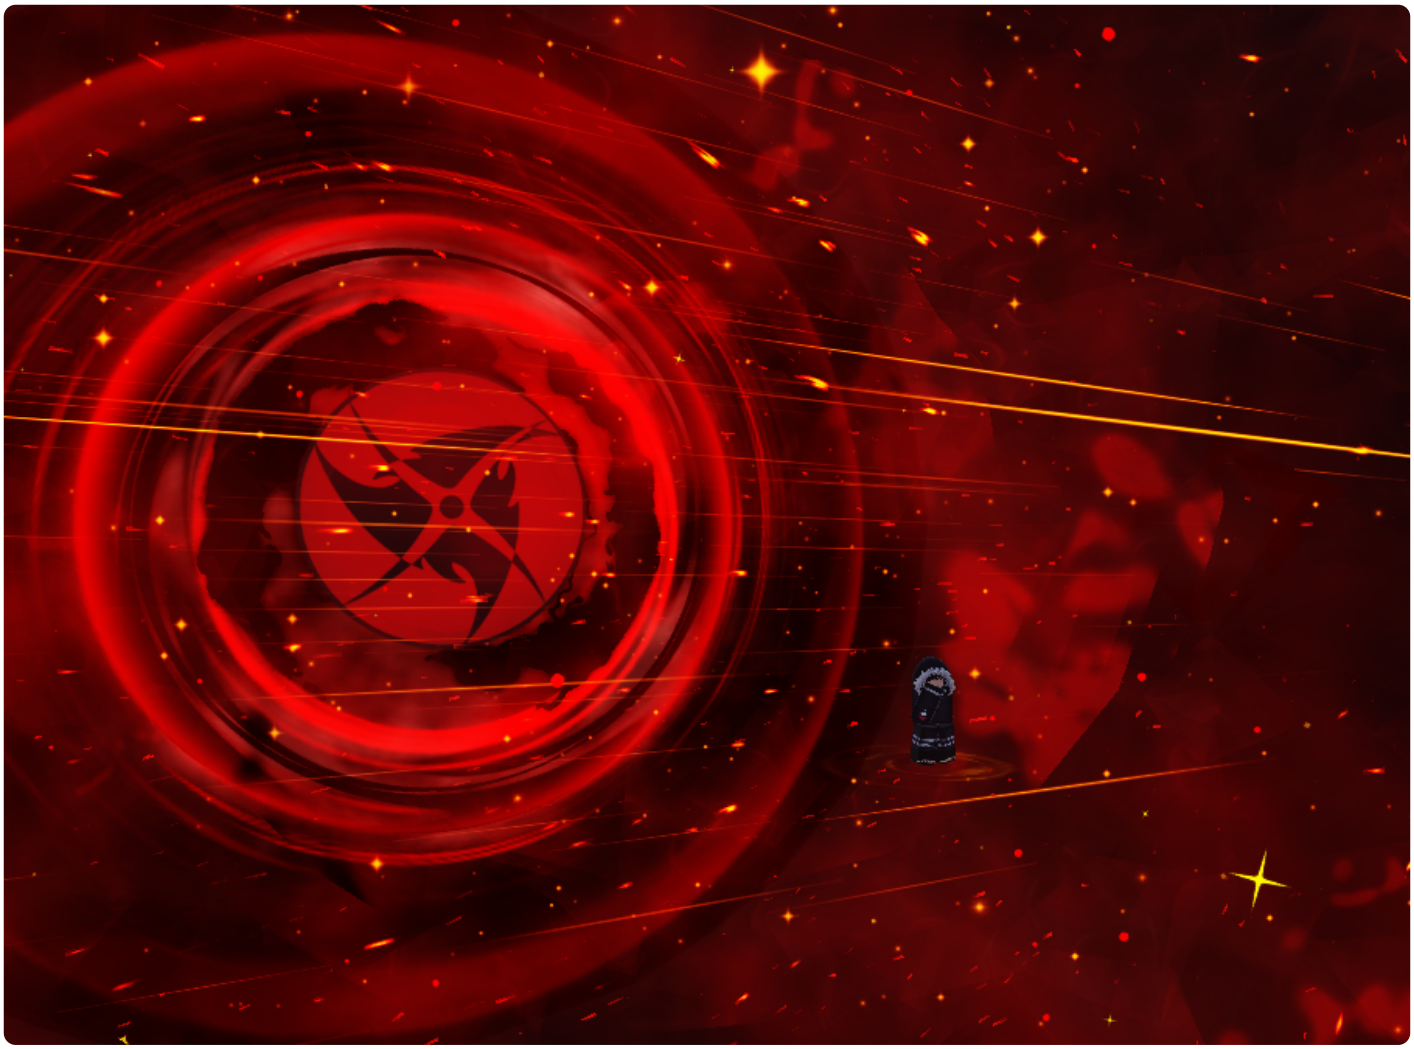

Carter's life took a different turn when he encountered One For All Chinoike during a Chunin exam. The two warriors faced formidable battles together, including a life-threatening encounter within the Mist Village. The experience left both injured, emphasizing the mortality of even seasoned shinobi.

Realizing that the cycle of war was unending, Carter distanced himself from the shinobi world and embraced blacksmithing in the Land of Iron. This decision reflected his commitment to personal growth and a desire to distance himself from the perpetual conflict that defined his earlier years. Carter Uchiha's journey stands as a testament to the complexities of leadership, the toll of war, and the pursuit of a different path in the face of adversity.

Ability

Carter Uchiha posed the Mangekyou Sharingan, though with limited techniques he was rumored to have had an advanced genjutsu by the name of "Tears of Eternity"

Sadly, Carter Uchiha was unable to learn farther techniques of his Mangekyou Sharingan before his passing but rumors spread that he was almost able to learn a technique that Shock Uchiha posed by the name of "Ribcage"

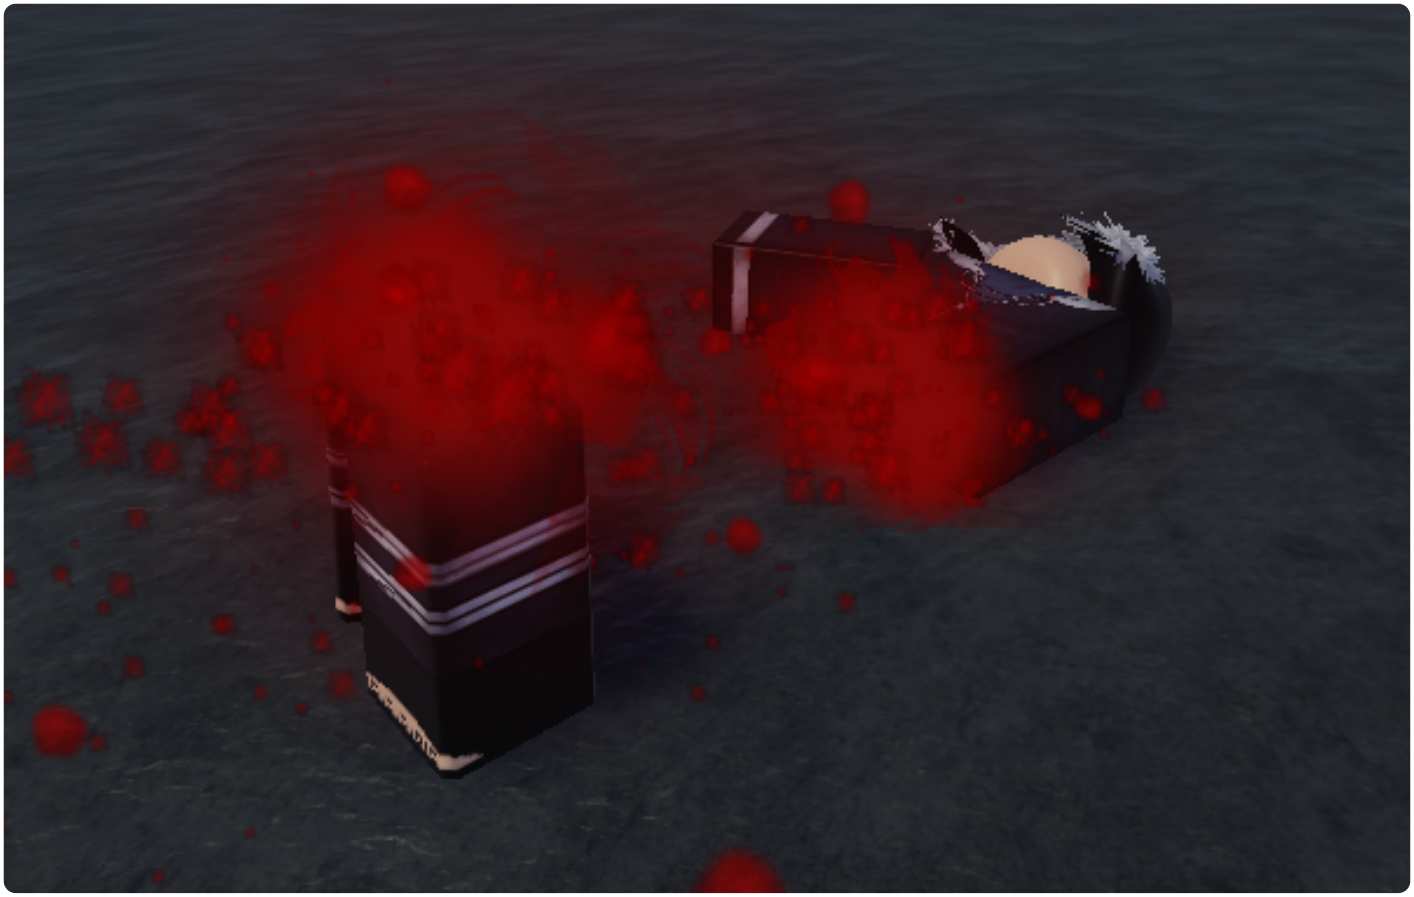

Carter Uchiha's "Tears of Eternity"

The End

With the aftermath of Shock Uchiha forcing him out of the village and attacks on others, Carter Uchiha found himself in a battle against Sungakure Shinobi after killing an infamous Shinobi whom he hated, Sloop Uchiha, conflicts started and tensions rose, at the end of the day with a group he was with Carter Uchiha found himself stuck in a situation where he would have to kill ones he once called allies for what he knew was the greater good. After all, he could not live with Sloop Uchiha living so what had to be done, had to be done.

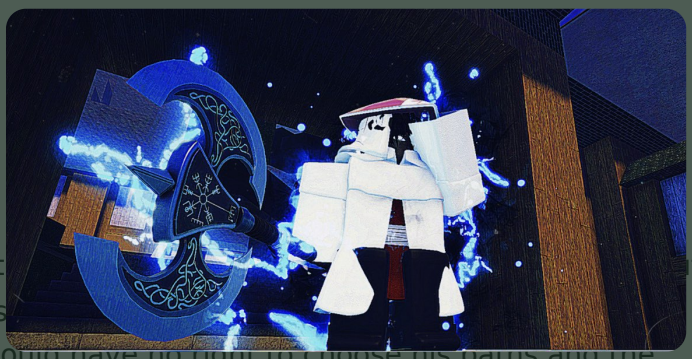

Carter Uchiha fell in battle to Tall Yome and Baal Yome respectively. A short and decisive battle where even his Mangekyou Sharingan didn't get to play that much of a role in.

Though, even if he may be dead his impact on the world will never be forgotten. He will always guide the Hidden Leaf in the end, he was, an honored one.

Journeys Fate

Rui Hyuga was born into The Land of Fire, and int t of his two brothers, Kato Hyuga and his eldest Jos Hyuga clan and named a child of prophecy. He would have no right to choose his paths and the Hyuga Clan would force upon him punishment and abuse for not being as perfect as they envisioned him to be. Rui had grew up in silence wanting to change the Hyuga clan as a whole, and find a type of link within the village allowing him to escape the grasp of the Hyuga, a job that could keep him away from them. He found it to be corrupted and started to develop a large hatred for the Hyuga and their ways, waiting to have the opportunity to rewrite the Hyuga clan's history and traditions.

Family Feuds

Rui obtains the title of Jonin even before all of his brethren and hides his philosophy and plans he'd have to change the hyuga clan for eternity. His father Matsuya Hyuga had already been prepared to get rid of Rui due to his lack of discipline and respect for the Hyuga clan. Eventually him and his brothers are called upon and fight breaks out between Rui and his father. Rui Hyuga, as a non-Main Branch member and as an immigrant of Konoha was forced to have the sacred Cursed Seal that many of the Side Branches of Konoha have.

Rui and Matsuya start to clash, Matsuya's skills already dulled with the aging of his body. Rui eventually tells his brothers to leave immediately as they rush out the facility. Rui and Matsuya end up destroying the whole compound during their fight as this what a fight between Father and Son. Matsuya eventually wears himself out as Rui uses a strange technique that's seemingly self-taught and impales Matsuya in the chest straight through his heart, with no second thoughts. Unfortunately for Matusya, his eyes couldn't adapt to Rui's speed.

Narukami's Will

During an expedition with Kumogakure, Rui went unconcerned. He woke up to a Battle Axe positioned directly above him, lined up exactly and precisely with his body. The axe begins to explain to Rui how he had been in a state of suspended death for a year in the real world, and that the domain he had arrived in was an interstice between the outside world and the core. Rui tries to ask what the “Core” is, but the Axe just says it’s the source of chakra. The Axe introduces itself as "Narukami" a vessel of natural chakra made from the mixture leaking chakra natural chakra and dead shinobi nearby that was forged into a blade. Narukami explains how it needed a vessel to connect to sustain sentience. It explains how chakra is a living thing and that it was able to form a consciousness from the unique circumstances Rui was placed in. Narukami explained the other Shinobi that still lived couldn’t control his power in their current state... It explained that the battle axe was forged by an old blacksmith to be used as a potential vessel for natural chakra, but he couldn’t find a way to gather it. However, the natural chakra that formed during the expedition and the dying shinobi’s chakra mixing gave the axe the ability to finally contain the chakra in the form of lightning. Narukami told Rui that he had bonded with him on a spiritual level, and it could not be undone unless Rui is killed.

The Third Hokage

Years later, Rui had served long lasting years as an Assistant for Lord Second, Carter Uchiha and the returning Lord First, Vane Senju. He had returned to the Hyuga Clan only to rebuild the compound he once destroyed and killed his father in and restore peace to the Hyuga Clan for now. The Village starts to exponentially get larger, and villages start to fall to rock bottom as the Konoha Empire was established, all had been good, but Vane Senju then goes missing, and unheard from.

Weeks go by, and finally the hidden leaf had chosen a leader, as Rui expected to be appointed next after Vane’s disappearance someone else was appointed… Shock Uchiha was named the 3rd Hokage and the village’s people suddenly become silent? Whispering and rumors started to spread. Propaganda started to be made, and everyone wondered why Rui hadn’t obtained his title. Vane Senju finally makes his return addressing the situation as the true leader was always meant to be Rui Hyuga. An argument starts in the hidden leaf and civilians start to protest for Rui Hyuga to be appointed the real Third Hokage. So of course, battle breaks out between Lord First, Lord Second and Rui vs Shock Uchiha. With a long-lasting battle that seemed to would never end. Shock finally throws the hokage hat to Rui, giving him his position, although leaving Rui silent and observant. Shock Uchiha than disappears rouging from the hidden leaf and Vane Senju formally naming Rui Hyuga the Third Hokage. Slowly but surely his eyes became more lifeless and dull as if the fruitful spirit that lied within him like his eyes were unriped fruits. All that’s left, is his cold glowing white stare.

The Splattering of Blood

After the Death of Vane Senju, when all hope was lost and The Will of Fire was snuffed out, a new hope came. Rui Hyuga as passed on the Torch by Vane Senju and ignited the flame once more bringing prosperity and restoring Konoha’s power and title of “The Strongest Village.” of its time leading arguably one of the best versions of Konoha. During his reign off and on war began between what used to be a strong alliance, Sunagakure and Konohagakure. With a surprising return of Shock Uchiha conflict had begun. Sprees of killing, murders, and blood were paved all across the Shinobi World.

Eventually, The First Suna-Konoha War had begun. During the battle Rui Hyuga tapped into the upmost perfect version of twin lion fists and built up a large fire inside the people of Konoha with just his words, Konoha being the underdogs of this war progressively started to destroy the competition with the honorable mentions of Rui Hyuga, Dan Hyuga, Shock Uchiha, and Ikari Uchiha showing that they are the true faces of Konoha. Sunagakure eventually retreated with the efforts of Konoha and its Faces of the Village.

Years later, peace had been restored to Mainland or so the Shinobi world thought. Konoha and Sunagakure would create an “Alliance” after the death of Musashi Kurogane and the destruction of the new Iwagakure. Though this was a strong alliance, it wouldn’t last long the inevitable repeated itself and the cycle continued. The Second Konoha-Suna war started as conflicted had risen due to Konoha’s new improved relations with Iwagakure. Rui Hyuga would wait for his opportunity to strike if his men were struck upon first as he had always gone by. Eventually, Sunagakure had made a move, killing a close friend of Rui’s named Renji Kurogane. With this, Konoha fully prepared its launch on Sunagakure ending it once and for all. Battle had begun between Konoha and its group of allies and Sunagakure. Hours upon bloodshed and tear drops, Tall Yome, one of the strongest mainland beings to exist had eventually fallen as Konohagakure claimed his head. With Konoha’s actions they avenged the Second Hokage, Carter Uchiha’s death and went on to prosper, with this Rui Hyuga would go on to Claim Tall Yome’s blade as souvenir and proof of defeating the First Kazekage. Rui Hyuga continues to reign and draws up plans for Konoha’s future as one of their biggest threats was out of the picture.

Rui dawning spoils of war

The Fall of the Scarlet King

After generations of prosperity, Konoha faced a new threat—one that had lingered since the days of Vane Senju: the Cult of Kumogakure. Nero Namikaze launched a mission to eradicate the cult once and for all. As Rui Hyuga attempted to pull his men back, the cult was already on the move, and battle erupted. Shinobi fell left and right, including Rui's own family member, Zeno Hyuga. Just when hope seemed lost, Rui tapped into a second wind he called “Mind over Matter.” A white aura surged through his body as he leaped into the fray against two cult members. Instead of retreating, Rui stood his ground, defeating one and forcing the other to flee. His bravery bought precious time for reinforcements to arrive, including his cousin Dan Hyuga and Ni Miyajima, the Tsuchikage. They fought valiantly against Ayaka, who fled as her forces were decimated.

Witnessing the devastation caused by Ayaka and the Kumogakure cultists, especially the abduction of Narukami, Rui resolved to confront the cult head-on, determined to either return victorious or die in battle. Rumors circulated that Ayaka planned to attack Iwagakure in retaliation for Konoha's defense. When Ni Miyajima found himself fighting alone, Rui joined the fray, battling with unwavering resolve on one leg. Despite the odds, he stood tall, inspiring fear in the hearts of his enemies and hope in the souls of his allies. As the battle raged on, Rui gave his final breath, defeated by Ayaka. His last words echoed through the chaos: “Don’t Let the Will of Fire Dim.”

Kento Uchiha would retrieve the body of Rui, wearing the armor as homage. He left behind his sister, Dakota Hyuga, his son, Axtra Hyuga, and his cousin, Dan Hyuga. He would also have taught many coming to be prominent shinobi, including Y'mir Yuki. Although many viewed him as a tyrant, he kept his belief true and fought in repentance, to save the family he struggled to protect. Regardless of if he was a Tyrant, he was an honorable one at that.

Fourth Hokage - Judar Namikaze

The Miracle is Born

In 3 BVE, Judar Namikaze was born. Through his e ng people and everything around him. Whenever the the one to get them out of trouble with his unnatu at his brother Aladdin called it Judar's "special talent." He used this so-called "special talent" to master one of his clan's most prized techniques, the Rasengan.

Judar always hated seeing violence, and more specifically, war, as he had been exposed to stories and tales of many people being hurt and killed due to human nature's tendency to conquer out of selfishness. He grew to despise this greatly, to the point of becoming squeamish and vomiting at the sight of dead bodies.

He was raised by his grandfather, Haruki Namikaze, whom he looked up to greatly due to the absence of his parents. Haruki was the only person Judar knew who could use both the "Flying Raijin" technique and the Odama Rasengan. Even with his ability to see "colorful lines," Judar was unable to fully grasp and understand the complexity of these techniques until a later age, which only made him admire his grandfather even more.

Leaving the Nest

Judar and his brothers woke up to perform their daily training. They were aware that Avalon was currently in a negative state due to the destruction and overtaking of the capital by a rumored "Calamity."

Coincidentally, on the same day, shinobi made their way to Avalon, though on what business was unknown to them. Haruki knew what the shinobi had done for the country and felt it would be best to trust his grandchildren with them while he did what he could to help fix the state of Avalon. Though it hurt Judar to leave his dear grandfather behind, he was extremely mature about it and understood. Judar and Aladdin had since resided in Sunagakure under the supervision of Mad Uchiha, Mikey Hoshigaki, and Aetamos Yome, while Nero resided in Konohagakure to pursue his own dreams of becoming the Hokage.

A World Without War

Judar began making extremely risky but significant moves the moment he set foot on the Mainland. He immediately sought to build relationships with every village leader and leading figure within the Mainland, soon gaining rapport with every village leader at that time, including the Land of Mountains, where he developed a student-teacher relationship with Ikari Uchiha.

This was all for his dream of a world without war. Judar had a single goal with the "special talent" bestowed upon him, and he intended to achieve it by any means necessary. Judar revisited Avalon several times, specifically for a certain person after discovering their cousin Park Namikaze within the Mainland. Judar built a relationship with this person, putting him on the same level as his grandfather, and often confided in him. This man became his one and only father figure.

Before his first trip to meet Ni Miyajima, Judar encountered a very imposing figure. Soon after, he discovered that this was Vi. Though very few words were exchanged, it seemed Vi knew things about Judar that he didn’t know himself. This encounter finally led Judar to give his "special talent" a name:

"The Strings of Fate."

Shortly after this interaction, Ikari took Judar and his brother to the Land of Mountains to discuss the rediscovery of Vi with Kenzo Kaguya. This allowed Judar to have a training session under Ikari and Kenzo, which he noted as an incredible experience due to the amount of growth he achieved in just a few nights of staying there.

What Goes Around Comes Around

Judar and Aladdin, along with other shinobi, were sent on a mission to Avalon by Aetamos Yome and Inaki Tome. From Judar’s point of view, a lot happened during this mission, most notably that he began to fall into depravity. Judar lost his grandfather, and not only that, but a side of his grandfather he never knew was revealed to him, making him even more sickened. Upon leaving Avalon, though he gained a relationship with Inaki Tome, Judar was left with two things:

He was half the person he was before, caught between his depravity and his humanity, and the kunai of his grandfather. With these two things, Judar’s want and desperation for his goal grew, and as his desperation grew, his tolerance for killing increased. However, soon Judar received word about the death of Mikey Hoshgaki.

This triggered one of Judar's first outbursts of anger at Sunagakure for allowing Mikey to go on the mission. The second outburst came when he received word about Aetamos Yome's death, which he attributed to the incompetence of the village. The breaking point was when he learned of Mad Uchiha's death, again due to the incompetence of his village.

These events led Judar to leave the village, especially after his brother, Nero Namikaze, who was the current Fourth Hokage, offered him a home in Konohagakure, which Judar initially declined. However, shortly after joining the village, a feud with Kirigakure led to the death of Nero, leaving Judar utterly broken. For the first time in his life, he didn't know what to do. He refused to let Nero's dream die, despite this, and took up the mantle of Hokage, being crowned the Fifth Hokage.

Shortly after, he lost another dear person close to him, adding fuel to the fire. His father figure perished to a Calamity right in front of his eyes.

Judar almost ended up like him, but both his own mental strength and the parting words of his father figure allowed him to persist.

But he refused. He refused to give in and effectively gained recognition from the Calamity. He emerged with steeled ideals and a clear path towards his goal.

The village was left in a crumbling state, and Judar quickly got to work. Within a year, Judar rebuilt Konohagakure from the ground up—not just in power, but in ideals. The village itself began to share Judar's vision of a land of true peace and fair judgment.

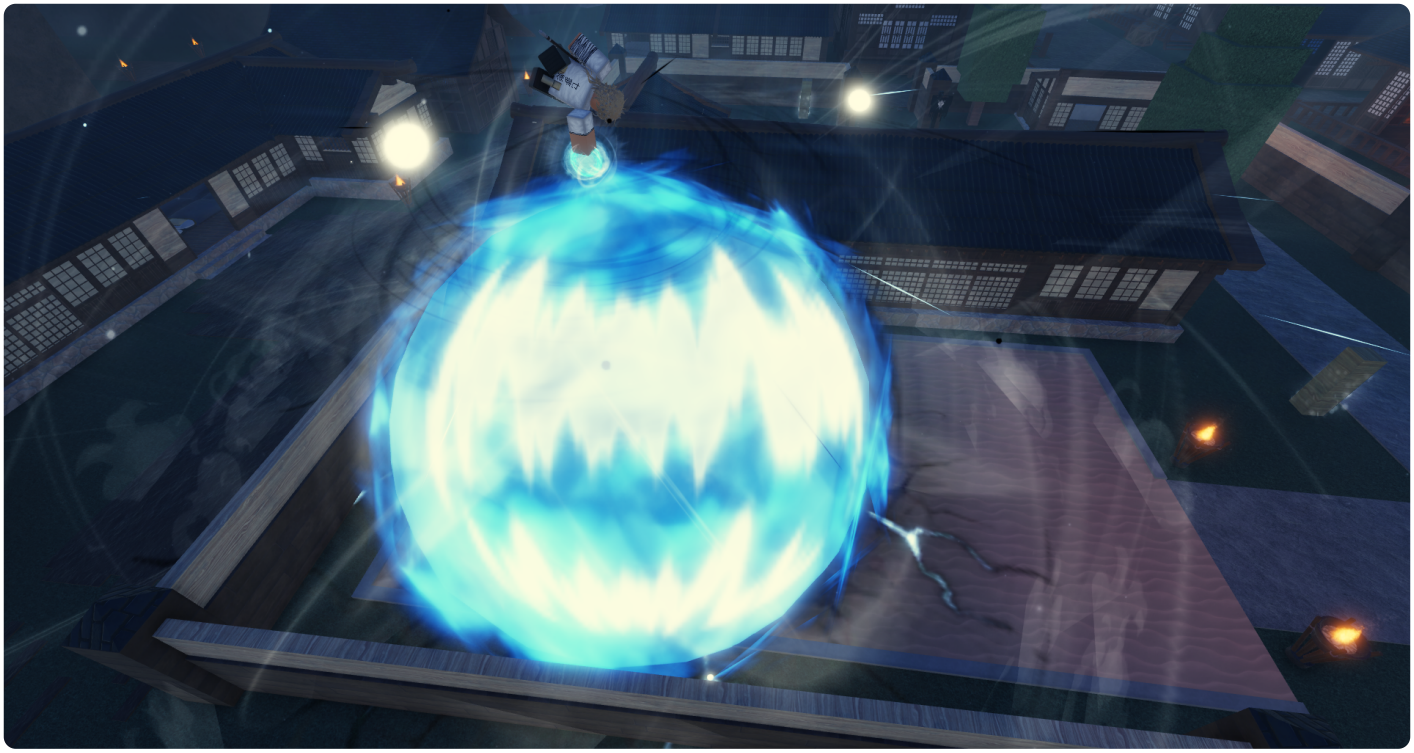

"A Land of Harmony."

During his time, Judar remembered to focus on himself, making full use of his "Strings of Fate" to create new, unseen techniques alongside his clan's techniques. He referred to his way of training and developing techniques as "cheating" due to his special ability.

Heart of Gold

Judar stepped down and relinquished the position, keeping his promise to the current high-ranking team of Konoha that he would give the spot to a natural-born Konoha shinobi after he rebuilt the village, passing the title of Hokage to Y'mir Yuki. Judar took this time to focus on himself, truly exploring his potential.

But during this time, a very grim day fell upon Judar. Park Namikaze died, and Judar returned to the village with the body of his little cousin in his hands, wearing a face of both regret and sadness. While his ideals did not waver, he truly questioned what it would take to end this cycle of hatred among humans, seeing as it had even affected his own family members, But, he already knew the answer.

Origin

Kato Yuki was born in 9 BVE, a refugee cut off fro
Despite this, he quickly proved to be a skilled shinobi during the reign of Carter Uchiha. Kato had two brothers, Asda and Raiden, with whom he maintained a close bond. However, he was a troubled child, often discouraging and neglecting those around him. He felt disconnected from the natural world, fixated solely on his own interests—a lost soul, looking for a path forward. Witnessing the death of Lord First Hokage, Vane Senju, caused grief unknown to others within Kato. Attaining the rank of jonin, not merely being saved.

For a long time, Kato had only one friend, Ringu Uchiha. They would share Dango, sitting together and dreaming about their futures. But when Ringu disappeared and was potentially abducted, Kato's stress consumed him. On his next mission, he turned his anger against not only the enemy but also the very people he was meant to protect. He killed 4 enemies and 2 farmers he was meant to protect after confusing them for the enemy. His ice, once pure, was now tinged a dark black. This destructive cycle continued for four years, as Kato acted solely for his own benefit. Even when Ringu was found, Kato was irrevocably changed.

Viewpoint

Years passed, and Kato refrained from interfering in village relations, considering the idea absurd. However, he seized opportunities whenever they arose when it was for his own gain. As the last surviving Yuki with Black Ice, Kato was summoned to assist Sunagakure, where he would meet a man who would profoundly change his perspective on the world, which he had long constrained.

Upon entering the halls of Sunagakure, Kato encountered a man with long white hair named Shaka. Shaka possessed untold proficiencies, a foreigner with wisdom past his years. He approached Kato, sensing his inner turmoil. For reasons Kato couldn’t explain, he felt a trust in this stranger. During their meeting, Shaka advised him, "Be careful of where you go and what you see; you never know what may follow." Those words would become a catalyst for change in Kato’s life, slowly beginning to ponder what it meant to be a shinobi. He slowly began to learn from Shaka, listening to the wise man's words and taking in as much information as he could. For the first time, Kato found someone to talk to other than Ringu.

A New Name

As Kato grew, his viewpoints did as well. Realizing the falsity of his ways, he made his own idealistic change. Kato was ready to give it all up—his false ideals, his false idols, his misguided mindset. In that moment of transformation, Y'mir was born. Y'mir Yuki embodied the change Kato embraced; they were not two separate individuals but two distinct ideals. Y'mir chose a path of peace, learning from Shaka about himself and the world around him. He managed to seal away his black ice, becoming the first in the known shinobi world to achieve this feat. He would further go on to train himself, and many others. Shaka would help him craft a weapon, to help guide not only himself but others.

A traveler, a seeker, a guide—Y'mir roamed far and wide, from the towering dunes to the unforgiving seas, from the highest mountains to the lush trees. After spending so much time in conflict, he was determined to broaden his perspective on life. Nobody could tell Y'mir where to go, or who to be. As each place he visited grew his understanding of the world, it also grew his understanding of self. But there was a void within him, one he couldn’t fill with his past actions. As his sense of harmony wavered, he made his final stop at the Land of Tea.

Path of a Seeker

An eerie feeling hung in the air as Y'mir pressed onward through the barren desert. After days of trekking through the sands, he finally reached the cave marking the border between Avalon and the Western Land of Winds. As he crossed the halfway point, a voice echoed in his mind: “There is no take without a give.” Frightened yet determined, Y'mir continued until he reached his destination—Avalon.

In the 2 years that followed, Y'mir was scarcely by people within the Land of Tea, not staying in one location for too long. He began to see the Land of Tea as a second home and a place for growth. The natural beauty of the land captivated him, but his restless spirit kept him from staying in one place for too long. Each place he visited, a tale of a Path Finder was born, and echoed throughout Avalon. Finding peace in virtue, he began to see the world clearly. Although the information is diluded to even Y'mir, his mentality even changed from this journey, a place he had grown more than any other. With this growth, he began his return to Konoha. A large spear finally revealed in hand and prepared for wherever his path took him, Y'mir was home.

The 6th Hokage

Upon returning home, Y'mir polished his Shinobi Ideals. He was deeply loyal to his birthplace, and even more to its people that raised him. He would finally feel the responsibility, those who raised him once felt. After vouching for Judar Namikaze, he was determined to return the favor. As a member of a non-native Leaf clan, a killer and a lost boy—someone without a clear path. Yet he had finally become more than just a lost boy; he had fought for what he sought and found his way and becam, The Path Finder. Y'mir Yuki was crowned the 6th Hokage, and no one objected. And at last, his path was found. His path, as the Hokage.

Building on Judar's vision for the village, Y'mir set about reconstructing it, establishing the largest Jonin military in mainland history, with over 25 Jonin at its peak. He dedicated himself to helping other villages and protecting those he could, all while safeguarding his own. Y'mir found happiness, where there is said to be only war. A testament, to an ambiguous path.

Y'mir preparing for battle.

Opposing Ideals

While the Hyuga clan agreed to unite because they thought it would be very beneficial for everyone in the future, the same couldn't be said for the Lee clan.

When the idea was proposed to them, they were quick to disagree, believing they were better off living on their own rather than becoming part of one big village. They stood their ground and declared that they would never do something like that. After this encounter, Ikari and Vane realized they couldn't just let the Lee sit there and not be part of their bigger dream, so during a Lee clan meeting, they made their move and forced the Lee to submit to them. They slaughtered nearly every Lee clan member in the area. Only a few individuals survived the onslaught.

With this, all of the clans residing in the Land of Fire were united, and the first of the five great villages was formed, the Hidden Leaf, with Vane Senju being made the Hokage and Ikari being appointed as his advisor.

Peace and Harmony

In the following years, Konoha continued to grow and advance as a village, even as other nations followed in its footsteps and created their own villages. Konoha dominated the Shinobi world. During this time, Ikari and Vane would go on countless missions, making their presence known wherever they found themselves.

After some time passes, believing that Konoha was in good enough hands for him to leave it to a successor, the Hokage steps down and goes missing for a while. With this, Ikari decides he wishes to explore the world.

Ikari would go on to travel to the Land of Mountains after hearing news of Kenzo Kaguya. As he makes his way through the land, accompanied by ???, he stumbles upon the residence of Tae Hyuga. The two converse about many things, and ultimately, Ikari decides to stay within the land to further improve his abilities. After the Chunin complete their mission on Kenzo, Ikari joins the group and learns new techniques.

Homecoming

News had begun to circulate that the Leaf village was going through major reforms and was at war with Kirigakure. Once Ikari heard of this and was told that it was Vane and one of his cousins leading the reform and war, he decided to have the original group of Leaf Shinobi he had left with rejoin the village with him. The day he rejoined the village was the day of the war. With this happening, he was able to fight alongside his village once again and put all his effort into it.

During the war, Ikari and Dan quickly make short work of the Mizukage, knocking him out at the start of the fight, though he is saved. He would go on to kill multiple Mist High ranks before fighting the Mizukage once again with his village. They manage to knock out the Kage again, yet he is picked up by the Raikage. A chase would then ensue for multiple hours as Yakuza ran and ran with Blare Yuki on his back. Ikari would barely be able to catch up and would use lots of long-ranged jutsu in order to hit him with something that would harm him and stop him from moving as he continued to run. Though this would come to an end as Yakuza is put in an earth dome and Mizukage is knocked off his back, he would quickly be picked up by Dan Hyuga, and the two ran away with him before ending his life, with Ikari taking his executioner's blade.

The leaf shinobi would return home after this and recuperate; they show off their spoils, and rewards are given out. Ikari is promoted to Village Overseer, ensuring the village's stability going forward.

Birthplace

Born in 12 B.V.E., Ringu Uchiha, originally named [illegible] two unknown parents in a small, developing family in the clan known as the "Naori" family. The Naori Family was a recently turned shinobi family which formerly served as a family of merchants; months after his birth, the once great family began to decline in wealth.

Graduation

Seeking a solution to their rapidly declining wealth, the Naori Family would send children of the family to the academy early in an effort to bring in some much-needed ryo to support the family's new business ventures; many of Kaneva's close kin and siblings would also be drafted by this system, himself included.

An Age of Turmoil and Change=

Soon after Kaneva became a chunin, he was drafted for the Land of Iron Jonin exams, which escalated into a large-scale conflict with the Kenrai Elite. Kaneva fought in the closing battles of the war, successfully killing one of the Kenrai and assisting Mikey Hoshigaki with carrying the Shogun away from harm. Months passed... fighting ceased, and the shinobi began to march back home. Kaneva, changed by the war, returned to find the final fragments of his once great family destroyed. His thoughts wandered upon the many different family recipes which had been previously deemed "Obsolete" by the time of his birth, He began to "Experiment" with different rice flours and seasoning. . led him to "borrow" spices and other vegetables from other lands during missions. Eventually, these experiments came to fruition, as Kaneva collected together the final dredges of his family's fortunes to open a new business, with his new invention, named "Dango," a dumpling made from rice flour and several secret spices. It was time for him to finally work on redeeming his family's name.

Even if he was the last one left...
