That Fated Day

Tall, finally having been able to set up all the preparations. was able to take Baal and the rest of the refugees into what we now know as the 'Village Hidden in the Sand'. Though, something was off, Tall heard screaming, yelling from the cave and rushed over. Everything was set ablaze, not by natural disaster, but by an individual. The fire being emitted was produced by chakra, leaving Tall to quickly look for the culprit. It was three oribe refugees who had followed Tall in pursuit of wiping out Tall for getting ruining the 'cycle of war'., in denial that this state of the Desert would end, they had brought it upon themselves to get rid of every Yome refugee inside that cave. Tall, jumping at them, noticed they were fairly skilled, being at what we now would consider 'Chunin' level. Tall had to make a choice, fight the Oribe, or save escapees but leave the weak to die, he was at a dilemma.

In that same second, Tall saw something with his eyes, somebody rushing towards the attackers. They performed flashstep, appearing in front of one of the attackers hitting them with the jutsu 'Waterfall' in the stomach close up.

Tall realized it was Bäal, not only that, but both of his eyes seemed to have been activated. He made a decision, and placed his bets on Bäal, running to save the rest of the people in the cave.

Personal Details

KILLS	20-50
STATUS	Dead
VILLAGE	Sungakure
QUOTE	Mercy can only take you so far!

Bäal conjures earth using 'Earth Gloves' to have more damaging and fatal attacks. With this, he uses Mud Floor slowing down the two Oribe left. He uses 'Earth Spike' going straight through one of the Oribe's left side. Then the final Oribe, throwing out a scorch blast, Bäal runs straight at it, with it hitting. The Oribe's second of relief turns to horror when he sees a whirlpool of water under him. Bäal had performed water predict, hitting the last Oribe with a Rising Wind into a Leaf whirlwind with his Earth Gloves on, being left in a near fatal condition, with his other two comrades, dead. Tall as in shock, he had taught the boy how to perform the jutsu, but his battle sense was unprecedented, he fought as if he had fought many battles before. Seeing Bäal with blood on his hands, saddened Tall heavily, feeling like he had failed a young child.

Chaotic Theory

A few days after this incident, the Sand Village had been officially established, and Tall had began the Sand Villages ranking system.

He had given a few shinobi he new that showed strength, the highest title achievable at the time of 'Chunin'. Those being, Vi, Lev, Akira, and Bäal.

Bäal had begun to don an eyepatch, constantly saying "it feels right", "it's telling me to", or "something bad will happen if I remove it."

Tall summing it up to be mild schizophrenia from his time in the cave.

All theorized remarks, with nothing proven.

Bäal had also found out him and Vi were brothers through Tall seeing the similarity in their Chakra, hypothesizing they had been separated during the Warring States period most likely shortly after being born.

From Theory to Reality

Bäal, venturing to the Land of Mountains alongside ???, had gone through several trials and tribulations, these trials acted as Catalyst for the day he would remove his eyepatch once more. After several training sessions alongside ???, events fell into play, causing the shinobi to fight Kenzo Kaguya, which Bäal had said himself, was the strongest person he's seen other than Vane and Tall. Getting knocked down several times, getting injured constantly, and the with the final explosion, everything that had led up to this moment were catalysts for Bäal to cause his own growth. He made theory, into reality. Bäal stating when he came from the Land of Mountains, he had newfound “Insight” on the concept of power and truth.
