

Plate Armor

Creation

Throughout history, dating back to the era of BYE. This armor typically includes shoulder and hip covers finished with red lining. When engaging in combat, ancient shinobi preferred this minimalist design, opting for reduced armor to prioritize mobility and agility. While this style may be rooted in ancient tradition, it remains highly effective. Today, it has become a popular fashion trend among civilians in the Land of Iron. For shinobi preparing for long journeys ahead, wearing plate armor as a tribute to ancient times serves as both a practical and symbolic choice.
