The Scouting Legion Life

Within the Scouting Legion, life is a compelling tapestry of camaraderie and heroism set against a backdrop of ceaseless danger and high mortality. The Legion stands as a crucible where soldiers forge deep bonds and experience personal growth through the adventurous exploration of the unknown beyond the colossal walls. Acts of heroism become a common currency, showcasing the resilience and unwavering courage of its members. However, this bright side is tempered by the shadows of psychological strain and isolation that pervade the soldiers' existence. The toll of witnessing the horrors of Titans and the uncertainty of their missions manifests in the form of PTSD and mental strain. Additionally, the isolation from civilian life, coupled with the constant exposure to peril, creates an environment where survival is not just a battle against Titans but a daily struggle. The narrative of the Scouting Legion unfolds as a complex saga, weaving together elements of resilience, sacrifice, and valor in the unrelenting battle for humanity's survival.

The Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron

The Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron [TRS], stands as the frontline squad within the Survey Corps. Their multifaceted responsibilities include reconnaissance (exploration of unoccupied land for strategic purposes), information relay, Titan baiting, Titan engagement, and Missing in Action (MIA) rescue missions. While primarily an offensive unit, the Recon Squad significantly contributes to defensive operations by assisting in Titan elimination and luring Titans away from the center of our formations to prevent harm. Due to their extensive exposure to dangers, the Recon Squad carries one of the highest mortality rates in the entire military. Consequently, this squad seeks only the most confident soldiers, individuals unafraid of the inevitable, to fulfill their expected duties. Members of the Recon Squad are expected to demonstrate determination, excel both as individuals and within a team, possess agility, keen observational skills, and proficiency in Titan combat. Their crucial role underscores the need for individuals with unwavering commitment and competence.

Members of this unit have the chance to join the sub-elite squadron, the Advanced Operations Unit [AOU], which is currently held as a sub-squadron within TRS. Members of the Advanced Operations Unit have a higher chance of getting hand-picked into the Special Operations Squadron.

The Research Team

The Research Team [RT] within the Scouting Legion plays a crucial role in comprehensive research. Comprising a diverse group of multidisciplinary researchers, our mission spans invention, construction, repair, investigation, assistance, and dedicated research. Beyond traditional boundaries, we collaborate with other Research Squadrons to address combat and non-combat challenges, including illnesses. Through collective expertise, we strive to develop innovative solutions, contributing significantly to societal improvement.

The Research Team is currently disbanded, however it will remain in the wiki as it has been continuously relevant in lore.

The Special Operations Squadron

The Special Operations Squadron [SOS], is the elite force of the Scouting Legion and comprises the organization's foremost individuals specializing in exterior combat. Distinguished as a classified squadron, all activities, events, and missions within the Special Operations Squadron are held under strict confidentiality. Membership is invitational, extended solely to individuals demonstrating elite skills, emphasizing this elite force's exclusive and distinguished nature.
