

Corfai

Overview

Corfai, a planet located in the Correlian Sector of the Core Worlds, is an ancient planet forged in the Pre-Republic era after Coruscant sent human sleeper ships in 27,500 BBY. Home to one of the oldest civilizations in the sector, Corfai developed into a titan of trade and commerce, its star ports flooding with wealth. Through the Republic's golden era, Corfai stood as the sovereign of commerce in the Southern Core, benefiting from its ancient roots and strategic position.

Society and Culture

Corfai's society is stratified by economic merit and institutional service, where citizens rise through proven success in state-approved businesses or district governance. Each city is led by a state-approved corporation focused on its growth and economy. These corporations have multiple businesses under them, represented in the Assembly. Businesses are viewed as legal equivalents to city districts, granting elites dual political and commercial power. The population prioritizes trade, guild loyalty, and upward mobility via elected roles, while artisans are ordinary business workers across the corporate hierarchy.

Corfai's culture venerates commerce as ancient civic virtue, blending Pre-Republic trade traditions with corporatist rituals that equate business acumen to public duty. Festivals honor business owners and successful politicians, art and media celebrate deal-making and merit-based ascent, and social norms reward pragmatic negotiation, corporate allegiance, and disciplined ambition over individual fame.

Government

A meritocratic corporatist republic is a form of government that combines three key ideas: meritocracy, corporatism, and republicanism. As a republic, it has no monarch and is governed by representatives chosen through a structured political system. The corporatist element means that society is represented not only by geographic districts but also by organized groups such as industries, professions, or labor sectors, which have a formal role in governance. The meritocratic aspect means that political power is at least partly based on demonstrated ability, qualifications, or achievement, rather than solely on popularity or wealth. Together, this creates a system where leadership and decision-making are shared between elected representatives and organized societal groups, with an emphasis on competence and expertise in those who hold office.

Military Significance

Serving as the primary security organization of Corfai, Corfai Security (CorSec, lumped in with Corellia Security as a sub security) is tasked with the protection of the planet's trade routes, planetary infrastructure, and overall system security.
